History & Heritage

Hereford Cathedral

From being the home of the 1217 Magna Carta and the Mappa Mundi, an outstanding treasure of the medieval world, to iconic cider making heritage, internationally renowned beef and the site of the Battle of the Roses, Herefordshire couldn't have more to offer the culture vulture. The legendary landmarks of kings, saints and poets dot trails of historic towns and villages packed with myths, folklore and factual material to enthrall you time and time again.

Waterworks Museum - Hereford

The Waterworks Museum – Hereford is a brilliant day out for for the engineering and history enthusiast. Suitable for all ages, this Museum is open one day a week – on a Tuesday between 11 am and 4 pm, and on special steam days.

Charting the heritage of Herefordshire's water supply, the Waterworks Museum – Hereford houses a unique collection of working industrial artifacts concerned with the supply of potable water, all in the authentic surroundings of a Victorian waterworks building and grounds.

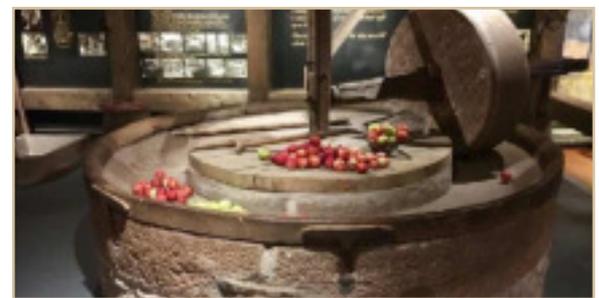

The Black and White House Museum

The Black and White House Museum is remarkably well preserved as it stands surrounded by the commercial centre of the City of Hereford. It is a startling sight, standing as the sole reminder of times-gone-by in the middle of a modern shopping precinct. Built in 1621, the house has been used for many purposes over the years, starting life as a butcher's home and shop. Since 1929 it has been a fascinating museum giving an insight into daily life in Jacobean times. It is furnished in period style with an internationally important collection of English Oak furniture and there are interesting pieces in every room.

Hereford Guided Walks

Take your group on a guided tour of the historic City of Hereford with the Herefordshire Guild of Guides. Hereford is steeped in history and these knowledgeable walk leaders offer fantastic detailed knowledge. You can choose a theme from Historic Walks, Haunting and Horrors of Hereford, Famous People of Hereford, The River Wye, History of Food in Hereford, Elgar musical walking tour or something else of interest to your group.

Hereford Cider Museum

Herefordshire is world famous for its cider and here is a wonderful way to discover its history and the traditions of how it was made, right through to the modern day.

A tour of the Museum reveals the history of cidemaking, and visitors have the opportunity of walking through original champagne cider cellars and viewing a cooper's workshop, vat house and cider making memorabilia.
